Does my college student really need a smartphone computing everywhere?

Answer these questions:

- Which are the pros and cons of smartphones.
- Why people feel that they need to have one?
- How students use laptops and smartphones?

WHICH ARE THE PROS AND CONS OF SMARTPHONES.

The pros of smartphones include providing mobile access to communication and information, offering various productive tools for students such as e-readers and study-based apps, and having the convenience of a computer in your pocket. However, the cons may be the fact that people could become lazier when everything is readily available at their fingertips, leading to a society that is becoming less intelligent with each passing day.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL THAT THEY NEED TO HAVE ONE?

People feel that they need to have a smartphone because it has become a vital tool for communication and accessing information in modern society. In fact, people do not just feel that they need a smartphone, but it is a necessity to stay connected in today's society, whether it's for communication, education or employment.

HOW STUDENTS USE LAPTOPS AND SMARTPHONES?

Students use laptops for homework, checking class updates, and note-taking, while smartphones provide on-the-go access to communication, information, e-reading, and various productivity tools. Smartphones can become an essential tool for students who can't afford a laptop to keep up with college life.
